Gentlemen,

Just a quick note during this public comment period to voice support for Microsoft, and for ending this action once and for all.

I believe the DOJ's case was marked by significant misunderstandings of the general business environment, the needs of consumers, and the technology-related questions in the case. This was further tainted by the very poor quality of testimony provided by members of academia and actions by Microsoft's competitors in what amounts to using the government to further their own business goals.

The government has wasted enough time and money on this ridiculous action, which in my opinion should have never seen the light of day in the first place.

Sincerely,
Jon McGuire
